Ray Jordan

91 Points

The quintessential Classic Dry Red made from a blend. Hard to fault as a wine at this price. Classy stuff. (2013 Vintage)

Classically Drinkable Red

Classic Dry Red. Margaret River. In smaller print, on the front label, comes the word: Shiraz. It may well be shiraz but it's a relatively herbal version. It's not unripe or hard; it's fleshy with berries and peppers and cloves, a smoky stalk-like character obvious throughout. It's not deep or profound but more importantly, it's not simple. It keeps you both guessing and interested, but in accessible way. It could be called a Classically Drinkable Red.
